Washington's "Farewell Address" - February 22, 1862. It is a Senate tradition dating back to 1862. On February 22 of that year, to boost morale during the bloody days of civil war, members of the Senate, the House of Representatives, the Supreme Court, and the president's cabinet gathered in the Senate chamber to hear Secretary of the Senate John Forney read Washington's Farewell Address.

Eventually becoming a yearly event, Washington's famous farewell has been read in the Senate every year since 1893.

 This diagram shows a text editor window with a sidebar on the left containing margin settings. The sidebar has four options: 'Show Text Margins' with two checkboxes (one checked), 'Set to left margin arrow', 'Set to right margin arrow', 'Set to both margin arrows', and 'Show Margin line'. Below the sidebar is a numerical label 61. To the right of the sidebar is a main text area with three numerical labels above it: 62, 63, and 64. The text area contains two paragraphs of text. Arrows point from the number 61 to the 'Set to both margin arrows' checkbox in the sidebar. Arrows also point from the numbers 62, 63, and 64 to the top of the text area.
